

Resource Box:

Ursula Schinzel

<http://ursula-schinzel.com>

News about Human Resources and Sports in Luxembourg

View my site for free news and articles

Can Individuals still make a difference?

This is the title of a Conference held in Chambre de Commerce and Sacred Heart University Luxembourg, starring Prof. DDr. Tarrach, Prof. Anthony J. Cenera, Neil Bearden and Stephen Brown.

The 4 keynote speakers discussed Science, Ethics, Education, Empowering People, Enlightened Leadership and Social Responsibility.

What opposes Science and Religion? Is there something behind scientific knowledge? How do Ethics and Believe match? How do Ethics and Responsibility match? About Education: Can a catholic University go into research of creation of life? Does an education based on believe can teach new science? Can we empower our people? If yes, how? What is enlightened leadership? What is Social Responsibility? Can Individuals make a difference?

Science and Religion are opposed by the fact, that Scientists don't believe that there is something behind scientific knowledge. Believers say that deepest mysteries in life bring us to uncertainty and trust. Scientists look at nature and try to find the truth. Science has invented medicine, agriculture, technology. Religion is about believe and about finding a meaning and purpose in our lives. Religion gives responsibility to our lives. Empowering our people is to reduce ethical failures. Our character decides about the things we do. We are ethically arrogant. Instead, we should be ethically humble. Enlightened leadership means not only Mandela, Gandhi, Martin Luther King, but also individuals. Leaders do something together with their group. They are making a meaning for their followers. The follower follows because he is member of something bigger than himself, because of recognition, because of adherence to a group.

Finally, the initial question was: Can individuals still make a difference. All 4 keynote speakers agreed. Yes, individuals make a difference. Who could make a difference? – All of us!